JIM ALLISON RETIRES FROM JAH

After practicing law for forty seven years, Jim Allison has decided to retire from the firm.

Upon his discharge from the Army, Jim joined JAH in August, 1971 and devoted his entire career to the firm. In addition to becoming recognized as one of the leading legal scholars in the healthcare field, he is also recognized for his knowledgeable corporate and real estate accomplishments.

However, Jim's strongest attribute is his relationship with his clients, whom he considered to be his family and major focus in his career. In addition, Jim was the firm's managing partner for more than a decade, during which he led the firm on its' successful growth into one of the city's leading law firms.

Both the firm and its clients have greatly benefited from Jim's many professional contributions and we wish him nothing but enjoyment in his retirement.
