My objective for every client, from Fortune 500 companies and closely held businesses to individuals, is to provide strong, consistent, and cost-effective legal counsel. I engage with clients to address their legal concerns in a timely and straightforward manner. When litigation becomes necessary, my clients depend on me to chart a clear path forward through what can be highly stressful times. At a time of crisis, clear thinking and command of the law is essential. It is my aim each day to provide exactly that.

Austin Walsh is a seasoned North Carolina litigator with a practice focused on construction and complex commercial disputes. His extensive trial experience makes him an invaluable asset to businesses and individuals facing the uncertainty of litigation.

Before joining the Litigation Practice Group at Johnston Allison Hord, Austin was a trial attorney at a mid-sized law firm in Charlotte, North Carolina and made frequent appearances in state and federal courts across the state.
